Relationship with Councils

- Members of NAEPC are Accredited Estate Planner® designees (approximately 2,200) and estate planning councils (approximately 270)
- NAEPC does not govern councils, indicate mandatory practices or procedures, or have requirements outside of the most basic discipline requirements (who the council must admit to membership)
- NAEPC does serve as a resource through its board, council relations committee, and staff while providing benefits for the council and its members.

What NAEPC asks of your council

- Share information about the relationship verbally and in print
- Add a statement about affiliation to council's email signature
- Participate in the Every Council Campaign
- Empower the council's executive / staff member to be a leader in the relationship

Our Best Kept Secrets

- Secret #1: We don't have access to the council's members unless the council grants us that access.
- Secret #2: Council members do not know about NAEPC! We need your help to share the message, messaging, and be our advocate.
- Secret #3: The annual conference is an educational event for all council members – not just council leaders!

BOARD BEST PRACTICES

Seven Best Practices of a High-Functioning Board

1. Stay On Top of (and open to) New Risks, Opportunities and Best Practices
2. Keep Members Top of Mind
3. Cultivate an Agile Approach to Leadership
4. Be Purposeful in Selecting an Adaptive Board
5. Challenge Yourself on Your Diversity of Thinking
6. Employ Proper Governance
7. Explore All Routes to Keeping your Board Working Effectively and Efficiently

Ideas to Help Your Board Stay on Track and Ready for Each New Season

- Host a board orientation for executive leaders and new members
- Detail the expectations of board members clearly and invite feedback
- Make getting to know one another a priority through the entire year – board social, board activity, ample time for introductions and “getting to know one another” activities
- Schedule a full board meeting for high-level discussion items
- Make sure everyone on the board can verbalize the council’s value proposition similarly
- Ask “WHY” questions
- Set organizational goals that every committee works toward. Use these goals in tandem with the mission statement to ensure there will be no mission creep. (Hint: goals aren’t always about numbers.)
- Find out what members are passionate about and make assignments based on those passions
- Survey the board about their feelings on important topics

OPTIONAL BENEFITS OF COUNCIL MEMBERSHIP

LEADERSHIP & COMMITTEE STRUCTURE

Leadership Structure

- The size of the board should be reflective of the size of the membership
- No “one size fits all” structure
- Providing a range in the number of required members can sometimes be helpful
- Understand and follow the bylaws; review with regularity

Committee Structure

Committees are ESSENTIAL to the effective operation of an association because they assign very specific responsibilities to a group of individuals, create a “farm team” of potential future board members, and allow the board to focus on larger initiatives and growth instead of regular tasks like finding speakers. The two most popular are standing committees (often prescribed by the bylaws) and sub-committees. Although not formally recognized by Robert’s Rules of Order, organizations will also sometimes create a task force, which is a time-bound and outcome-focused group.
